Greenpoint Energy Center

Saltwater Pump House Upgrade | November 2025

Dear Neighbor,

In coordination with the FDNY, our crews are currently upgrading the saltwater pump house (SWPH) at National Grid's Greenpoint Energy Center with a new elevated facility.

The SWPH can use a nearby saltwater source as a supplemental fire suppression system that protects the entire Greenpoint Energy Center. This modernized fire suppression system is designed to withstand storms and other environmental impacts, improving the resiliency of critical energy infrastructure.

This work will include the installation of new piles, both on land within the facility, and in the water of Newtown Creek. A turbidity curtain and oil boom will be installed within the creek before water side piling work begins to keep any loosened sediment within our work area. Our crews will also utilize vibration monitors throughout the facility during piling work.

As part of National Grid's net-zero commitment to reduce its own emissions, the facility will include solar panels on the roof to supplement electricity for the building. The new SWPH is expected to be completed in Winter 2028.

There will be no impact to National Grid service to customers. As construction activities are scheduled our team will continue to keep you updated. If you have any questions about this work, please visit ngrid.com/saltwaterpump for more information, or contact our Project Engagement team at the phone number or email below.

Thank you for your patience and understanding as we complete this important work. For your safety, please do not enter work zones.

Thank you,
