

BPI Infiltration and Duct Leakage

Diagnostic testing is the first step to more efficient homes.

We have to understand a problem to create a great solution. By earning the Infiltration and Duct Leakage (IDL) certification you'll gain the skills to conduct blower door and duct leakage tests that are needed to understand a home's energy loss.

The IDL certification is right for builders, remodelers, HVAC, and other contractors who want to improve new and existing homes. The IDL is simple, comprehensive, and affordable.

Steps to earning BPI's Infiltration and Duct Leakage Certification.

- 1 Apply at ngrid.com/bpicertified.
- 2 Get matched with a participating training location.
- 3 Earn the Building Science Principles Certificate of Knowledge.
- 4 Get expert training for the IDL certification exam.
- 5 Challenge the IDL exam.

BPI Infiltration and Duct Leakage (IDL) professionals must recertify every three years.

Candidates that meet specific work experience criteria during their certification period may be able to bypass the recertification exam.
